Don't touch my doggie woggie

Encased meats be damned! Chicago's best known for the dogs that run this town: man's best friend. A proud pooch owner since birth, and the current owner of a mutt named Chompers, I've run into a few pleasant and some not-so-pleasant scenarios in our daily adventures. Which is why I've come up with a few tips and tricks to help make your next dog encounter a pleasant one.

» Just assume my dog will eat you. When I've got a 95-pound half-lab, half-horse of a dog at the end of a leash, you'd think people would shy away from such a large species. You'd be wrong. Perhaps it's Chompers' goofy grin that makes people run up to him with glee, but that's not always the safest bet. When approaching a dog, ask its owner if the dog would like to be petted. If the answer is no, perhaps you can pet the owner instead.

» For the love of Fido, don't talk to us in a "doggie" voice. You know the voice—that cutesy, woosy, annoying voice that is almost as gross as what the dog is about to do on the grass. Since he can't speak for himself, I'll say it: Chompers most certainly would not care to "have a wittle doggie tweat" and kindly asks that you stop referring to him as "a wittle doggie woggie" lest he pee on your leg.

» Don't worry, I'm going to pick it up. I see you there, eyeing me, as if to say, "So help me if you don't pick that poop up, I'm going to stare you down until you explode into smithereens!" Do you think I walk around with an empty Target bag for fun? Trust me, I'm not having an enjoyable time either, so let's all just get through this as quickly as possible and we'll all be on our way.

» Keep YOUR dog on a leash. Although I've been around dogs my entire life and am quite comfortable around them, I will not hesitate to drop-kick a strange dog who is off a leash and bolting toward me. The truth is you don't know what a strange dog will do. So while you might know your shitzu-pomer-wiler just wants to play, Chompers and I are thinking, "Incoming! Destroy now!"

» Feel free to smile. Smiling at a person with a dog is a great way to say, "Hey, I like nice things like dogs, and I'm not a creep." It brings faith back into humanity when people kindly smile at a dog walker. Perhaps they're commiserating in the fact that they too have to lug their canine around multiple times a day, or maybe they just think it's funny seeing dogs chewing their own leashes while the owners are scolding them. Nonetheless, it's a nice thing to do. So do it.

Hopefully these tips make your next canine encounter an enjoyable one. And if all else fails, roll over.

HELLO & GOODBYE

By Georgia Garvey | REDEYE

For devoted Apple fans, the news Wednesday that Steve Jobs would be stepping down as CEO might have felt like the end of the world. Turns out, the company's stock barely felt the impact and the rest of us survived, too. In fact, RedEye noticed that recently, as soon as someone says "goodbye," there's another newsmaker waiting in the wings with a cheery "hello." See what we mean?

That's the shade (is it weird to call it a shade?) of the "L" line that Mayor Emanuel took to work at City Hall on Tuesday. Just the day before, he'd touted accomplishments from his first 100 days in office, saying, "This is a down payment. This is just the beginning."

TEA PARTY

THE SWEET STUFF IS HAVING ITS MOMENT IN CHICAGO THIS SUMMER

By Kyra Kyles

REDEYE

Look at it.

You know you want it.

Light brown with flecks of amber. Swimming with gleaming ice cubes. Sugary with a slight, tart twist of lemon.

You're not drinking alone if you can't resist the siren song of sweet tea.

The Southern beverage—which some consumer researchers say is typically sweetened with cane sugar—is sweeping the nation, infiltrating fast-food restaurant menus and winning over patrons who once ordered pop.

Iced tea sales in general have increased by 12 percent during the past decade, according to consumer research company NPD Group, which estimates that 65 percent of sales of sweet tea come from fast-food transactions. And the Chicago market is no exception to the ongoing sweet tea takeover.

In fact, the national demand is widely believed to have started with Oak Brook-based McDonald's, which brought this once Southern-centric beverage to the fast-food forefront in 2008, according to McDonald's spokeswoman Ashlee Yingling. A Raleigh, N.C., operator cooked up (or brewed up, rather) the idea and it caught on with corporate, Yingling said.

Mintel consumer research analyst Kathy Hayden said McDonald's has played up the Southern tinge in its branding and to impressive results, according to her data.

"Our customers absolutely love it," Yingling said of the sweet tea, adding that McDonald's decided to add the sweet tea to its national menu after determining it resonated beyond the Southern states. "Now, along with smoothies and strawberry lemonade, it's a big part of our push to become a beverage destination."

McDonald's success also ushered in additional takes on the sweet tea trend; it's currently on menus at chains prevalent in Chicago from Popeye's to Church's Chicken. The beverage also got a boost this summer when Atlanta-based chain Chick-fil-A—which holds a Guinness World Record for pouring up a 9-foot, 1,400-gallon cup of the stuff—entered the Chicago market with its 30 E. Chicago Ave. location.

Sweet tea is among Chick-fil-A's most popular offerings, according to a company rep who pointed out it has long been on its menu and they sell it by the gallon.

"I am a little surprised at how it's taken hold in the Midwest," NPD consumer research analyst Bonnie Riggs said.

"It's such a Southern trend, but it is clearly appealing to people, and a wide demographic at that."

It's set to grow even more, according to Riggs interpretation of data that showed sweet tea sales up 5 percent over the same period last year while other beverages—including pop—declined.

"There are perceptions of health in tea beverages, even when they are sweet," Riggs said, adding: "About 45 percent of the time it was ordered at lunch, and 34 percent of the time it was ordered at dinner."

"It is being treated as a beverage to go with

POPEYES

Pour some sugar on me

RedEye's taste test of Popeye's Louisiana Kitchen, Chick-fil-A, McDonald's and Church's Chicken beverages reveals which sweet tea best lives up to its name. Here they are, ranked by most to least sweet.

- » McDonald's
- » Popeyes Louisiana Kitchen
- » Chick-fil-A
- » Church's Chicken

Staff favorite

Customers might "love that chicken from Popeyes," per the old-school ad. But RedEye staffers love the sweet tea from the Louisiana Kitchen. The Popeyes version of sweet tea—also available by the gallon—emerged as the overall favorite with a score of "3" on a scale of 1 to 4, with "4" being the one each tester considered their favorite. Chick-fil-A swings in at second place, just missing the mark by .25 points.

the main meal. Basically, a replacement for what a consumer would normally drink."

Both NPD and Mintel analysts said they are keeping an eye on sweet tea's momentum, specifically to see if carbonated beverages will soon get their sweet revenge.

But if you ask Ka-Sean Sanders of Lakeview, sweet tea will only grow in popularity. The 39-year-old told RedEye she drinks sweet teas at least three times a month, most often from McDonald's.

"I try to have it in moderation," Sanders said. "Tea is good for you, but you have to watch that sweetness. I'm careful. It could become addictive."

KKYLES@TRIBUNE.COM | @THEKYLEFILES

RAISING CANE

Which sweet tea is the best? To answer that question, RedEye sacrificed our taste buds to the gods of sweet tea on a memorable Monday afternoon. Four volunteer staffers gathered in our conference room for a blind taste test of four fast-food sweet teas that Mintel and NPD consumer researchers mentioned as big players in the sweet tea space. We ranked the teas on a 1-4 scale on sweetness and chose our faves. Sixteen Dixie cups, four plates of palate-cleansing saltine crackers, a half bag of ice and one sweet session later, here are the results of our nonscientific sampling of sweet tea.

Chick-fil-A: "Gave me some sugar. Lemon-nayed."

Popeyes: "No thank you."

McDonald's: "Any tea in that sugar?"

Church's: "Weak sauce."

Lisa Arnett

Chick-fil-A: "Clean finish. Color looks most tea-like in color as opposed to cola-like."

Popeyes: "The sweet aftertaste tastes artificial."

McDonald's: "So sweet it almost tastes like Thai iced tea. Too sweet for me, sorry."

Church's: "This one seems to have the most diluted tea flavor."

Dana Moran

Chick-fil-A: "Most tea-y and drinkable. Best balance of flavors."

Popeyes: "Still a little too sugary. Tastes kind of syrupy, like a melted Popsicle."

McDonald's: "Sugar hits hard at the end. It's a recipe for tummy aches."

Church's: "Unremarkable. Almost a little watery compared with others."

Leonor Vivanco

Chick-fil-A: "Not lemony at all. But hello, sugar! I'll be on a sugar high after drinking this."

Popeyes: "A good blend of lemon and sweet. One doesn't overpower the other."

McDonald's: "[So] sugary that I feel like I need to brush my teeth."

Church's: "Needs more sugar. Tastes super bland. Might as well just drink water."

Red, hot and 'With You'

The Red Hot Chili Peppers are (from left): Chad Smith, Josh Klinghoffer, Anthony Kiedis and Flea. LOS ANGELES TIMES

By Mark Beech

BLOOMBERG NEWS

The Red Hot Chili Peppers are in the running for the most repulsive album cover of all time.

"I'm With You," which started streaming online this week and will be in stores Monday, shows a hairy housefly sitting on a drug tablet. The image, by Damien Hirst, is about as inviting as the disgusting "Infest" by Papa Roach.

ALBUM I'm With You

Red Hot Chili Peppers

Fortunately, the music is more appealing. With their 10th studio album, the Californians can expect to add to their tally of 65 million records sold. Despite guitarist Josh Klinghoffer having joined the band in 2009, the quartet hails the latest release, produced by Rick Rubin, as the work of a new unit.

Well, not quite. Much of the old trademark sound is still there: tight bass lines by Flea, complex drum fills from Chad Smith, knowing vocals by Anthony Kiedis. There's a lot of variety, from the rocking "Monarchy of Roses" to the mourning "Brendan's Death Song" and the bouncy single "The Adventures of Rain Dance Maggie."

But after a few plays, it all sounds underwhelming. Maybe these tattooed wrinklies are mellowing as they hover near 50.

At least the title was a prudent choice: Kiedis said the recording almost was called "Dr. Johnny Skinz's Disproportionately Rambunctious Polar Express Machine-Head," based on a drug experience.

Keep taking the pills, guys, just not the one on the cover.

The Beaver

Available now

Under normal circumstances, we'd be talking about potential Oscar nominations for stars Mel Gibson, Jennifer Lawrence and Anton Yelchin, and director Jodie Foster. There's been nothing normal about "The Beaver," from its odd name to the plot: a man falls into such a deep depression that he can communicate only through a hand puppet. It took someone with the clout and talent of Foster to create this story about love and life so poignant that even the absurdities of the story line (and Gibson's real-life drama) fade away.

The Rip Tide

By Beirut; available Tuesday

Four years after the indie success of Beirut's richly layered "The Flying Club Cup," Zach Condon and his band are making music that's mature and stately while re-establishing the intimately miniature and zealous brand of foreign intrigue that started when he first recorded as a kid of 19. "The Rip Tide" is brief (less than 35 minutes) and does offer Condon's usual mix of Baltic cabaret, French chanson and Mexican mariachi. But such complex mood swings are present in understated poppy fashion. A.D. AMOROSI, THE PHILADELPHIA INQUIRER

Doctor Who

Season 6 of the international hit continues with "Let's Kill Hitler," an episode that stars Matt Smith and Karen Gillan called "wonderful" at San Diego Comic-Con. "It's my favorite title of the season so far," Smith said, adding that Alex Kingston turned in her best performance to date as River Song, who we learned earlier in the season—Spoilers!—is actually Amy Pond's (Gillan) daughter. In this ep, their time-traveling police box, the TARDIS, crash lands in 1930s Berlin. I can't wait to see it.

Morgan Spurlock's funny doc explores the world of product placement, marketing and paid advertising inside movies. He made the movie by filming his solicitations of companies to pay for inclusion and it succeeded. Not only did he get the money and make the movie, but it was recently certified by the Guinness World Records people as having the most paid placements of any film ever.

William & Catherine: A Royal Romance

8 p.m. Saturday, Hallmark

Dan Amboyer and Alice St. Clair may look like HRH Prince William and Catherine Middleton, but I hope that's where the resemblance ends. If the real royal couple is this devoid of personality, I'm not sure what all the fuss is about. This boring made-for-TV movie follows the couple from their meet-cute at college to their first snog (that takes forever to happen) to their breakup and finally—spoiler!—to their engagement. Romantics will swoon; I yawned, a lot. One thing worth a look, though, is Jane Alexander's Queen Elizabeth playing Wii tennis.

Comic book canon yields a quality lead character -- if not leading man -- in 'Captain America'

Michael Phillips

Chris Evans in "Captain America: First Avenger."

Everything good about "Captain America: The First Avenger," which certainly is the most stylish comics-derived entertainment film in direct opposition to the attention-span-destroying likes of "Transformers 3." It's paced and designed for people who won't shrivel up and die if two or three characters take 45 seconds between combat sequences to have a conversation about world domination, or a dame.

This is the fifth film in the interconnected Marvel comics universe, wherein the whole gang — Captain America, Iron Man, the Hulk and Thor, plus their superpowers — will come together to form a boy band next May in "The Avengers." So what makes "Captain America" more than just a pro forma origin story?

For one thing the movie takes its mythology seriously without choking on it. Director Johnston knows and loves the comic's period; he made "The Book of David"

Easy being green

By Lisa Arnett

The direction of dining expansion typically goes like this: Launch a successful restaurant in the city, then colonize the suburbs. But Prasino, an eco-conscious eatery with a name that means “green” in Greek, first grew its fan base in suburban St. Charles and La Grange before opening its third location in Wicker Park. After a delicious dinner charmed the hell out of me, I was looking forward to returning for breakfast, which features a massive menu served every day of the week.

Prasino
1846 W. Division
St. 312-878-1212
Breakfast times:
7 a.m.-2 p.m.
Reservations:
Accepted, walk-ins welcome

I'm still trying to forget ... how the meal started. Excited for a handful of drinks made with kombucha ($6-$6.50), a tart and slightly bubbly fermented tea, I ordered the apple-mint kombucha ($6.50). I'll chalk it up to we-opened-two-weeks-ago confusion, but what

I got instead was the kombuchamosa (orange juice and tea), and my first sip contained what can only be described as a 2-inch-long goober of orange pulp. A solid reassurance that the orange juice is fresh-squeezed, but may I suggest a strainer next time?

Feeling toasty: I've had croissant French toast. I've had pretzel pancakes. But I have never had pretzel croissant French toast. Prasino miraculously combines the fluffy, flakiness of a croissant with the chewy, toothsome outside of a pretzel into one singular pastry, and then slices two of 'em before battering and browning. With salted caramel and white chocolate sauce, you don't even need the provided butter or syrup for this to attain pure brunch bliss. The best French toast I've had all year, no question.

Good eggs: One of Prasino's signature offerings are stacks ($8.50-$11), open-faced sandwiches of thick toast with various toppings and eggs cooked to order. After loving the braised beef short ribs with truffle mushroom cabernet sauce at dinner, I couldn't resist the short-ribs stack piled with avocado, pico de gallo and cheddar. The meat was just as good, but the bread could be crispier to stand up to all that egg yolk and toppings.

There's more: I wasn't kidding when I said the menu was massive: There are omelets ranging from rustic (with merguez lamb sausage and farmer cheese, $10.50) to luxe (lobster, caviar and truffle hollandaise, $16) and crepes with chocolate-covered espresso beans and vanilla whipped cream ($10).

Bottom line: Though not every bite was perfect, I'll return to Prasino, especially because a brunch cocktail list will debut soon. The only thing harder than deciding whether to sit outside or in will be what delicious-sounding dish to try next.

Bet on these Bears

They're no dream team, but they might help your fantasy squad

By Scott Bolohan | FOR REDEYE

Preseason football is in full swing, which means one thing: Fantasy football starts soon.

During the next two weekends, most fantasy drafts will be held, bringing you months of joy or months of regret if you took Joseph Addai over Arian Foster, as yours truly did last year.

Besides taking bad running backs over the best player in fantasy, other common pitfalls include taking the home team too early. It's easy to want to draft Jay Cutler and then root for him while watching the Bears (all right, Cutler wasn't a good example). Blame it on familiarity or fandom. Just don't let it be you this year.

Here are the best Bears fantasy options and when it's reasonable to draft them.

SCOTT BOLOHAN IS A REDEYE SPECIAL CONTRIBUTOR.

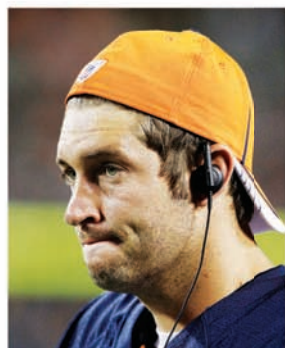

1 MATT FORTE SECOND TO THIRD ROUND

Forte is frustrating because he isn't your typical running back who runs through holes for 4 yards at a time. But he makes up for it with his receptions, a staple of the Mike Martz offense, getting a boost in points-per-reception leagues. However, his value probably takes a hit this year. Marion Barber was brought in because of Forte's struggles at the goal line, so his TDs will fall. Still, Forte is a solid No. 2 running back.

2 ROY WILLIAMS 8TH TO 10TH ROUND

Williams is known for being a huge disappointment. But he did excel under Martz in Detroit (as much as he ever has, at least). There's a huge chance he'll be a bust, but Cutler is going to throw the ball a lot and someone has to catch it. Williams could become a No. 3 receiver in fantasy. Or you'll cut him.

3 JAY CUTLER 10TH TO 12TH ROUND

Lots of passes. Lots of interceptions. He'll have some good games. Lots of risk. Given his receivers still aren't near what he had in Denver, Cutler is no better than a backup in fantasy.

4 JOHNNY KNOX LATE ROUNDS

Knox has tons of talent. He's super fast and a fairly big receiver. He should be a stud in a Martz/Cutler offense. Yet he's not even starting right now. Still, the Bears offense simply is not very talented and at some point they'll have to give Knox a chance. He's worth a late pick.

5 BEARS DEFENSE LATE ROUNDS

The unit is younger than it has been recently, but not necessarily better. Peppers and Urlacher are studs, but there are holes at cornerback and linebacker. This will be a startable, if unspectacular, fantasy defense.

Give the Fire some encouragement as they try to make the MLS playoffs.

No thanks, they have enough warmth on their own team.

It'll be good for you—there are no ties in the playoffs.

FIRE UP! FIRE UP! BOILER UP! KETCH UP! I'm sorry, I've been drinking.

Come on, guys, ONE Chicago team has to make the playoffs this summer, right? Right?

Oh, so you might not make the playoffs? Think of the children!

Enter a number between 1 and 9 in the empty squares. The clues are the numbers in the white circles that give the sum of the solution numbers: above the line are across clues; below the line are down clues. Thus, a clue of 3 will produce a solution of 2 and 1, and a 5 will produce 4 and 1, or 2 and 3, but, of course, which squares they go in will depend on the solution of a clue in the other direction. No digit can be repeated in a solution. Answer at redevechicago.com/puzzles. EDITED BY MICHAEL MEPHAM

Make a 2- to 7-letter word from the letters in each row. Add points of each word, using scoring directions at right. Finally, 7-letter words get a 50-point bonus. “Blanks” used as any letter have no point value. All the words are in the Official Scrabble Players Dictionary, 4th Edition. SIMON SAYS WHAT?

Some strange, strange things have been coming out of Simon Cowell’s mouth lately

By Dana Moran | REDEYE

Earth to Simon Cowell. Come in, Simon Cowell. The “X-Factor” host has been making his interview rounds ahead of the show’s premiere Sept. 21, and it sounds like he’s been drinking the same crazy Kool-Aid as his former “American Idol” cohort, Paula Abdul. Three of these quotes are from Cowell; two come from other celebs. Can you spot the Simon sound bites? DAMORAN@TRIBUNE.COM, GETTY IMAGES/FILE PHOTO

Win some, lose some

Derek Jeter got his 3,000th hit, but he lost the girl. Jeter and longtime girlfriend Minka Kelly have split, her rep confirmed to people.com. Kelly is set to star in the TV reboot of "Charlie's Angels," but she won't be Derek's angel any more.

Justin Bieber

'I Beliebe in Santa Claus'?

Justin Bieber took to his Twitter to ask fans to help him name his Christmas album. "It is special," Biebs wrote. "We are going to raise alot for charity with it." No word on a release date, but you probably won't be able to escape it once it's out.

No jail time

Actress Jaime Pressly was sentenced to three years of probation and ordered to attend a six-month alcohol education class after pleading no contest to drunken driving charges. Pressly, who will star in "I Hate My Teenage Daughter" this fall, blew a .22 in her sobriety test—more than twice the legal limit—when she was pulled over in January. She also must have an ignition-locking device installed on her car.

Backstreet's banned, all right

China's Ministry of Culture ordered music download sites to delete 100 songs in the next two weeks, or face some sort of unspecified punishment. The songs were deemed a threat to China's "national cultural security." Among the banned songs:

"Judas" and "The Edge of Glory" by Lady Gaga

"Last Friday Night" by Katy Perry

"Run the World (Girls)" by Beyonce

"I Want It That Way" by the Backstreet Boys

Backstreet Boys

Naked and crying

When "Modern Family" star Julie Bowen was pregnant with her twins, she wasn't buying what she heard about the glory of motherhood. "I was like, 'Who the [bleep] are you talking to?!' This isn't golden and mystical. If you could see me naked, you would weep," she said in the September issue of More magazine. "I weep on a regular basis. Children are like crazy, drunken small people in your house."
